Photo shows Mrs. Osterman on Broadway with live dove on her hat; drawings suggest other ways of creating a sensation.

In the great matinee crowd on Broadway recently, Mrs. Osterman appeared with a real live dove perched on her hat. The lady seemed to spring up from nowhere at Thirty-fourth street and Broadway. She was neatly dressed and perhaps would have passed unnoticed, but for her hat with a real live dove as a decoration. New York has been talking about the odd event. Our imaginative cartoonist sees how other people can get themselves talked about if they will but go to a little trouble.

NOMINEE WILLIAMS OUTLINES HIS VIEWS

Cites Many Important Features of a New State Office to the People.

H. E. Williams, Republican candidate for commissioner of agriculture, says:

"In my primary election campaign I stated that in my judgment, it is not only the duty, but the privilege of every candidate for office where the public interests are affected, to express his views on questions in which the people are interested, so that they may know his position and with reasonable certainty anticipate his action. I did so in my primary election, in what might be termed my platform. It is therefore a matter of pleasure for me to again express my views to the people of West Virginia on some of these important questions.

"In my judgment the office of the commissioner of agriculture is one of the most important in the gift of the people of the state, because of the great responsibility and far reaching influence which has been placed upon this commissioner by the legislature, and of the possibilities for agricultural developments which lie within our state. Possibilities which are limited only by two things. The appropriations from the legislature, and the man's ability and willingness to serve the people.

"I believe that agriculture is the fundamental and perhaps the most important of any of the industrial pursuits. The consumption of food products in West Virginia is far greater than the supply. We have much waste and worthless land in West Virginia, which can be made to bring good returns. Much of the land now under cultivation is not sufficiently productive. We ought, therefore, to exert every effort to develop our lands, conserve our soils along practical lines and make them productive of the things most profitable, whether that be apples or blue grass or something else.

"I believe in the development of our natural resources, such as coal, oil and gas land, but under such a system as will prevent all unnecessary waste, and will conserve for future generations as much of that product as may be in keeping with our present needs.

"We ought to develop our timber lands, but under such conditions as will best protect from destruction that part of the forest not now of sufficient size to be of market value. The average timber owner or lumber man is helpless under our condition in West Virginia. In my judgment the state should, in some way, encourage and help in the protection and conservation of our forests.

"I favor the best system of public schools possible under our conditions.

"The standard set for our teachers should be the highest, and their compensation in just proportion.

"I believe that the farmer should have legal protection from the importation of filthy and polluted agricultural seeds, and that the feeders should be protected from the importation of mixed and 'untrue to name' feeding stuffs.

"I favor the creation of a public utilities commission to assess values on public utilities and to so regulate their service that neither the corporation nor the public shall be imposed upon. A just compensation for service rendered is certainly the moral and legal right of both capital and labor.

"I favor a primary election law whereby all political parties may have nominations made at state expense on the same day on the same ballot and in such a manner that the choice of the people may be clearly ascertained.

"There are many things along this line which might be mentioned, such as pure food law, properly enforced. The collection of agricultural statistics at such time and in such manner as may be of value to the state and the nation in estimating the quantity of the product, and thus being enabled to anticipate prices.

"I favor co-operation, with the real estate agents of the state, to the end that our farms may be repopulated and that new people and new blood may be scattered throughout our state for the production of those things of which we are so sadly in need. Last, but by no means least, I favor the construction of a good system of public roads by national, state and local co-operation.

"The cost of food products will continue to be governed by the supply and demand. Under our conditions local competition is entirely removed for many months of the year on account of the condition of the roads. Our country churches and country schools can not prosper as they should under such conditions.

"These questions I have been studying for years. I know the farm from the practical 'hard work' side, and my work in school and college has been of the same character.

"I do not offer a solution for all these problems, but whether elected or not I shall continue to work as best I may for the best solution, because they must be solved and solved right."
